Most people don't think highly of sloths because they spend most of their time sleeping or hanging from trees. They not only move slowly but also take up a month to digest their food! However, the sloths may not be as lazy as we think. Here are some interesting facts that could change your ideas about one of nature's most relaxed-looking animals.

Sloths spend a great portion of their lives sleeping, but not all of their time is spent in this way. In fact, wild sloths seldom rest for over 10 hours at a time. That is not much more than the average human sleeps in a night. However, sloths raised by human usually sleep for 15-20 hours every day.

What's more, sloths can be found in trees most of the time because they are vulnerable to predators. To protect themselves, their hair contains algae to make it green and serve to camouflage the animal in the trees. Therefore, different from what people think, the reason why sloths seldom come down from the trees is not because of laziness but because a tree is the safest place for them.

One final fun fact about sloths is their strength. Sloths are strong and good swimmers. Also, if a sloth dies when hanging from a tree, it will often continue to hang there even in death!

With all the interesting information, hopefully your impression of one of the world's most slow-footed animals has changed a bit!
